

Users of egg products have the opportunity to set themselves apart by using egg products of a particular regional origin

The new rules enable producers of egg-containing products to use egg products of a particular origin for a specific market and state the relevant information on origin on the product labels. Producers are thus given the opportunity to set themselves apart from other suppliers by using egg products of a particular origin.

When will the new rules take effect?

The new rules will take effect as of 1 January 2018.

Origin labelling is mandatory from 1 January 2019. Labels without information on origin may be used up until that time.

For labels already printed or for printed packaging, an exception that allows the transition period to be extended (beyond 1 January 2019) can be granted by agroVet GmbH by means of a written approval.

The new Standard

The revised Standard can be found on the agroVet website at www.agrovet.at/en/traceability/traceability-of-eggs.

Contact persons

Contact person for the Standard:

Dipl.-Ing. Michael Zoklits m.zoklits@agrovet.at

In the course of the desired separation of standards development, and inspection or certification activities, Dipl.-Ing. Michael Zoklits (professional experience in the area of the EU Organic Regulation 834/2007 and animal welfare standards) has taken over the maintenance and further development of the Standard and acts as liaison for third parties in that respect.

Contact person for inspection contracts, inspections of compliance with the Traceability Standard, certifications:

Processing of eggs or egg products:

Alexander Buxbaum Bakk. techn. a.buxbaum@agrovet.at

If you have any industry-specific questions (e.g. bakery products), our internal experts will be pleased to assist you.

Producers:

Dipl.-Ing. Bettina Holzer b.holzer@agrovet.at

